PUTIN DISMISSES ACCUSATIONS OF
MEDDLING IN ELECTION

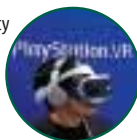

I Russian President Vladimir Putin insisted his country was not involved in an effort to influence the U.S. presidential election. Last week, the U.S. government formally accused Russia of launching a hacking campaign to “interfere with the U.S. election process.” Clinton’s campaign, which has charged the Kremlin is trying to help Republican Donald Trump win the White House on Nov. 8, took its allegations a step further on Tuesday when John Podesta, chairman of the Democratic nominee’s campaign, accused the Trump campaign of colluding with Russia. REUTERS

JUDGE GIVES FLORIDA
VOTERS MORE TIME TO REGISTER AFTER STORM

2 Residents of Florida were given six extra days to register to vote in the Nov. 8 election by a U.S. judge on Wednesday following the disruption caused by powerful Hurricane Matthew in the state last week. U.S. District Judge Mark Walker in Tallahassee extended the registration deadline to Oct. 18, after the Florida Democratic Party filed a lawsuit seeking more time, court records showed. The original deadline to register had been Tuesday, before Walker ordered a one-day reprieve to allow for a hearing on the matter on Wednesday. Florida Democrats had argued that voters were forced to decide between their safety and their right to vote when Republican Gov. Rick Scott ordered mandatory evacuations along a stretch of the state’s Atlantic coast as Matthew approached. REUTERS

SONY ENTERS VIRTUAL REALITY WITH
PLAYSTATION VR

3 Sony Corp. will join the race for virtual reality (VR) dominance on Thursday with the $399 PlayStation VR, a headset the Japanese electronics group hopes will beat pricier rivals and revive its reputation as a maker of must-have gadgets. Emerging from years of restructuring, Sony is reshaping itself to focus on lucrative areas such as video games, entertainment and camera sensors — rather than televisions or smartphones where demand is flat, competition acute and margins thin. The games unit is now the single-largest profit contributor for the group. The PlayStation VR headset, Sony’s first major product launch since it declared its turnaround complete in June, will put the company back on the offensive and test its ability to compete in one of the most talked-about spaces in the industry. REUTERS

NYC's nightclubs filled with imported models who live for free, insiders reveal

At $500 a head it pays to keep a core set of women to take clubbing.

AMANDA MIKELBERG
@MetroNewYork
amanda.mikelberg@metro.us

Help wanted: model to live rent-free in amazing New York City apartment, get free dinners and transportation. Must be able to hang out and dance at high-end NYC clubs night after night.

It's the type of ad that some nightclub promoters post on international websites where real fashion models look for work. Its purpose is to attract women who are willing to entice men to frequent clubs that the promoters are paid to promote.

The arrangement is typically referred to as “model houses.” It remains something of an industry secret in New York and across the globe. To some, it may seem devious. To others, it's entrepreneurial genius.

The women are often from such places as the Middle East and Eastern Europe. They arrive with little money but with hopes of landing in New York to get their modeling careers off the ground. The promoter pays their airfare and then provides free housing in his New York City apartment where five to 15 other ladies live.

“Those promoters control the market,” setting a club's attractiveness standards,

providing a club's status that corresponds to bottle service prices, Roy Lugasi, a veteran New York club promoter, told Metro.

Lugasi claimed that a club might pay a good promoter $1,500 to $2,000 a night; sometimes they can make as much as $500, even $700 per model they bring to the club. He takes his entourage of models to more than one club a night, five to seven nights a week.

“They're not just good-looking women. They are real, tall, fashion models,” he said.

The promoters encourage the women to dance near the table to ensure they're not lured away by a rival promoter and drink only enough to keep up appearances.

“It's still her own free will,” another veteran promoter, “Travis,” told Metro.

“It's not a lie. She's getting the perfect opportunity and she is safe,” he said, explaining that the promoters sometimes have a car and a driver, or guarantee a taxi to make sure they get home safely. “The promoters are for the most part good guys. They take care of them,” Travis said. “The girls would be ... partying anyway. They live for free, sit at the best table, have a car, drink for free.”

A sad truth in the modeling industry is that women who get signed to agencies — even the top agencies that staff Fashion Week runways and catalogs — are made to live in an official model housing and have to pay expensive rent, causing many of them to go into debt, as CNN reported in an expose. Those apartments might be in bad condition, could be roach and rat infested, and are often not in desirable locations.

The promoters' model apartments are “much nicer,” Travis said.

Lugasi is trying to change the scene with his app, Weepo, which allows club-goers to choose a venue based on “real people” and chat with them beforehand.

Infrequently, some women associated with promoters will have sex with club patrons for cash, Lugasi said.

“Someone who comes in and pays $5,000 to get a table next to the promoter table might have two women who are very, very hot go over and speak to him,” he said. “Then they go with him and when they get them into bed they say it's costing money.” Then she'll put him on the phone with the promoter and work out a deal, he said.

“Someone who comes in and pays $5,000 to get a table next to the promoter table might have two women who are very, very hot go over and speak to him.”

Protesters take to Trump Towers to 'topple' candidate's presidential bid

GETTY IMAGES

Dozens demonstrated outside Trump's Fifth Avenue building.

NIKKI M. MASCALE
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascale@metro.us

With chants of "P—y fights back" and "Un-endorse Donald Trump," more than 60 protesters, nearly all women, gathered outside the Republican presidential candidate's Fifth Avenue building Wednesday in hopes of bringing his White House run to a close.

"It seems like this has reached a tipping point where people are finally saying this is not OK, and we just want to be here to topple this campaign," Nadya Stevens, one of the organizers, told the New York Post.

The protest came less than a week after a 2005 video surfaced of Trump using vulgar language to brag to Billy Bush, then-host of NBC's "Access Hollywood," about groping women and trying to have sex with a married woman.

"I just start kissing them," Trump is heard saying in the footage of beautiful women he's attracted to, adding that "when you're a star they let you do it" and he would "grab them by the p—y."

"It's not about lewd language, it's about sexual assault," Stevens said of Wednesday's demonstration. "We wanted to encourage all women to speak up and defend themselves."

Domestic violence shelter offers safe haven for family pets

A second women's shelter in Harlem is offering safe haven for the dogs and cats of families torn apart by domestic violence.

The Urban Women's New Beginnings shelter on Wednesday opened an area where residence can play with their pets as part of the People and Animals Living Safely program sponsored by the nonprofit Urban Resource Institute.

The program is the only one in the city that allows survivors of domestic violence to live in shelter apartments with their pets, institute officials said.

The play area was created in conjunction with Nestle Purina PetCare.

"We know that the lives of many survivors — human and pet alike — will be improved because of this amazing space," said Nathaniel Fields, president and CEO of URI.

The new Purina Pet Haven at Urban Women's New Beginnings is the third pet space built by URI at a shelter. The first pet space was constructed in 2014 at a shelter in Brooklyn and a second opened last October at a shelter in Harlem. They are the only pet parks in domestic violence shelters in the city.

The URI provides a variety of services to domestic violence victims, homeless individuals and families and other at-risk people. GARY KANE

Adopt a pet and then get 'Stuffed' with North Shore Animal League and Lisa Lampanelli

Lisa Lampanelli, the "queen of mean," isn't known for keeping mum. She said her parents taught her never to talk about who she is voting for or how much money she makes. Everything else is fair game.

Animal adoption and body issues are two topics the comic will talk about freely and on Thursday you can chat with her about both outside the McGinn Cazale Theatre, where Lampanelli's play, "Stuffed," is running.

North Shore Animal League America, the world's largest no-kill shelter, will roll a mobile adoption unit full of adoptable cats, dogs, puppies and kittens into Manhattan on Broadway and 76th Street.

The adoption event, which will be held from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., is a celebration of Lampanelli's first foray into theater, unless you count "high school crappy versions of 'West Side Story' and 'Annie Get Your Gun,'" Lampanelli joked during an interview with Metro.

Lampanelli, who said she hopes her pup Parker will remain the only man in her life, adopted her dog from Animal League.

On Thursday, Lampanelli and the rest of the cast of "Stuffed" — Ann Harada, Zainab Jah, Jessica Luck — will be doling out love for the adoptable pets before the evening's performance of the off-Broadway show.

Finding Parker was a gift for Lampanelli and she said she hopes others find the same love.

"You can't walk away from that [Animal League] truck without owning a pet," she said.

Accused bomber to be arraigned on New Jersey charges Today

A man accused of bombings in New York and New Jersey last month that injured dozens is set to be arraigned on New Jersey state charges today, one of his attorneys said on Tuesday.

Ahmad Khan Rahami, who was born in Afghanistan, is set to be arraigned at the Union County Courthouse by video feed from his hospital room where he is recovering from gunshot wounds suffered during his arrest, Alexander Shalom said.

Union County prosecutors charged Rahami with five counts of attempted murder of a police officer and weapons charges.

Shalom, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, is temporarily representing Rahami on separate federal charges until public defenders can take over the case.

Rahami, 28, has been held in a Newark, New Jersey, hospital with wounds suffered during a shootout with police on Sept. 19 when he was arrested. He faces federal charges in both states stemming from a bombing the previous weekend in Manhattan's Chelsea neighborhood that injured 31 people, and explosives found in two New Jersey locations. No one was killed in the blasts.

He also is accused of planting another pressure-cooker bomb in Chelsea that failed to explode, and multiple devices at a train station in Elizabeth, New Jersey. One of those exploded as a bomb squad robot attempted to defuse it.

Authorities described Rahami as a "jihadist" who begged for martyrdom and praised late al Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden. Rahami bought bomb components on eBay, made a video of himself testing out homemade explosives, and kept a journal expressing outrage at the U.S. "slaughter" of mujahideen in Afghanistan, Iraq, Syria and the Palestinian Territories, federal officials allege.

New study: Sandy-like storms could occur in NYC every 20 years by the year 2100

Was Sandy just the beginning of New York City's 21st-century hurricane threat?

With the fourth anniversary of Hurricane Sandy approaching, many New Yorkers are still reeling from its devastation; in fact, the city recently allocated another $500 million in taxpayer money for repairs due to storm damage. And though this seems grim, a new study from a group of researchers at Princeton and Rutgers universities and the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution is even more troubling. Based on a storm-related computer simulation of flooding, "Hurricane Sandy's Flood Frequency Increasing From Year 1800 to 2100" predicts that in a worst-case scenario, by the year 2100, such powerful storms will occur every 20 years, an increase of 17 times the current state, reports Phys.org.

Back in February 2015, the New York City

Panel on Climate Change released a separate report that said by the end of the century, sea levels in NYC could rise 22 to 50 inches, "meaning the amount of land within FEMA's proposed flood insurance rate maps will double, covering 99 square miles of the city," as 6sqft previously noted.

The new study accounts for both sea-level rise and storm activity due to climate change, and its modeling technology not only looked at future storms, but historic ones as well. By looking at past weather patterns, the researchers saw that "Sandy-like surge floods increased threefold during the two centuries from 1800 to 2000." Based on these patterns, sea-level rise alone will increase the frequency of such storms by 4.4 times, but when the group factored in "changes in storm climatology" this jumps to 17 times.

According to Ning Lin, lead author of the paper and an assistant professor of civil and environmental engineering at Princeton:

What this tells us is that large surge floods are likely to increase in frequency, but that there is a large amount of uncertainty about the extent of the increase.

... Engineering-wise we've always considered sea level and climate as static, but now we need to account for the change over time. Our work is focused on putting predictions of flooding on a truly quantitative basis by incorporating factors that are predicted to change. If you don't account for rising sea level and possible change in storm activity, you're underestimating future flood risk.

Construction worker fatally struck by crane equipment at Brooklyn worksite

A worker was killed Tuesday at the construction site of a new 13-story hotel in Brooklyn.

Paul Kennedy, 43, of the Bronx, died at the scene after a piece of equipment fell from a crane and struck him in the head at a Bond Street construction site near Schermerhorn Street, authorities said.

"His scalp was ripped back," an unnamed construction worker told the New York Daily News. It is unknown if Kennedy had been wearing a hard hat.

The site is a former parking lot that was purchased in 2014 by GFI Hospitality and GFI Development, which owns The Beekman and Ace Hotels. The hotel is expected to open in early 2018.

Work on the project was halted pending an investiga-

Christie Brinkley selling Sag Harbor Colonial waterfront home for $25M

Supermodel Christie Brinkley is selling her Colonial waterfront manor in Sag Harbor for $25 million.

Built in 1843, the three-story home has five bedrooms, including a master suite with a sitting room and terrace, 5½ bathrooms, a full basement, formal dining room, great room and large living room.

Other amenities include period details such as façade columns, wide-plank pine floors and several fireplaces, plus soapstone and marble counters in the kitchen.

Outside, the 4½-acre

property features gardens, specimen trees, a Gunite pool and a 327-foot beach.

Enzo Morabito of Douglas Elliman has just brought the property to market, and the agency said the historic home boasts water and sunset views from nearly every room.

The 20-acre Bridgehampton estate Brinkley put on the market in June is still available for $29.5 million, Douglas Elliman confirmed.

That home, which Brinkley owned for 18 years, has four bedrooms, five baths and a 50-foot observation tower, as well as a heated pool with spa, "park-like" paths, multilevel terraces, a greenhouse conservatory and barn/studio with additional living quarters.

Douglas Elliman said back in June that Brinkley was selling "Tower Hill" in order to downsize and move to Sag Harbor as she became an empty nester when the youngest of her three children went off to college this fall.

BRIEF

Fed policymakers closer to rate hike, but inflation doubts remain

Several voting Federal Reserve policymakers judged a rate hike would be warranted "relatively soon" if the U.S. economy continued to strengthen but doubts on inflation remained, according to the minutes of the Fed's September policy meeting released on Wednesday.

The minutes of the Sept. 20-21 meeting, at which the U.S.

central bank held rates steady, also showed the depth of division over timing.

"Several members judged that it would be appropriate to increase the target range for the federal funds rate relatively soon if economic developments unfolded about as ... expected," the Fed said in the minutes.

Seventeen policymakers participated at the September meeting, of whom 10 had a vote. In the minutes, both voting members and the wider group were divided on how much more they can allow the labor market to strengthen before raising rates.

Some believe that with the United States already near full employment, inflation could rise too quickly if the Fed waits too long.

The minutes said "it was noted that a reasonable argument could be made either for an increase at this meeting or for waiting for some additional information on the labor market and inflation."

U.S. stocks rose slightly following the release of the minutes, while yields on U.S. government debt pared earlier gains.

"They just want a bit more data to be sure. We think they will have those data by the time of the December meeting," said Ian Shepherdson, an economist at Pantheon Macroeconomics.

John Stumpf GETTY IMAGES

Wells Fargo CEO John Stumpf quits, replaced by Tim Sloan

The changes come weeks after pressure on the bank when it emerged that its employees had potentially opened two million unauthorized deposit and credit card accounts to meet sales targets. Wells Fargo agreed to a $185 million settlement with regulators.

Wells Fargo & Co's veteran chairman and chief executive officer, John Stumpf, is leaving the bank in the wake of a sales scandal and will be replaced as CEO by President and Chief Operating Officer Tim Sloan.

The San Francisco-based bank said on Wednesday that Stumpf was retiring with immediate effect. It is splitting the role of chairman and CEO with Stephen Sanger, its lead director, becoming chairman.

Elizabeth Duke, an independent director, will be vice chair.

The scandal marked a stunning reversal of fortune for Stumpf, who had built Wells Fargo into the world's most valuable bank with a focus on Main Street-style lending that was the envy of Wall Street.

Politicians were calling on him to resign and a week after a roasting in front of a Senate committee, Stumpf agreed to forgo $41 million in unvested stock awards.

However, that was not enough and at a second hearing, some lawmakers called for the bank to be broken up.

"I have decided it is best for the company that I step aside," Stumpf said in a statement.

The bank's shares rose 2 percent in after-hours trading.

On Monday, the bank had reshuffled its top management to give more responsibility to Sloan.

Wells Fargo is due to report third-quarter earnings on Friday. REUTERS

I panicked –

My hair was thinning!

Amy felt her hair was shedding and starting to look bad. She wanted to do something about it. Here is her story:

Lately my hair started to look dull and it was shedding like crazy. It was frustrating because thick and beautiful hair makes me feel good about my looks and I didn't want to lose that.

Nutrients for your hair

My friend told me about Hair Volume™ tablets. I searched online and found all the positive reviews and also learned that temporary hair loss due to lack of nutrients is common. I wanted to do something good for my hair so I decided to give Hair Volume a try – what did I have to lose?

3 months later

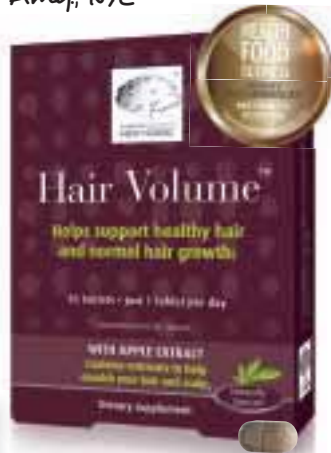

A few days later I started taking Hair Volume, and now it has been almost 3 months. I feel so much more confident and happy that I am caring for my hair. My husband recently commented on my looks, which made me feel great. I strongly recommend this product to anyone who wants to promote healthy and beautiful hair."

Justice Department finds racial bias in San Francisco policing

The report made 272 recommendations for the department to address issues from institutionalized and implicit racial bias against African-Americans and other minority groups to updated use of force and data collection policies.

The U.S. Department of Justice on Wednesday released a report outlining deficiencies it found in the embattled San Francisco Police Department, including apparent racial bias in traffic stops, searches and killings.

The critical 60-page report comes amid an intense debate in the United

San Francisco Police GETTY IMAGES

States over police violence and a resurgence of the civil rights movement, spearheaded by activist group Black Lives Matter, fueled by police killings of unarmed African-Americans across the country over the past two years or so.

The report is the first assessment in the Justice Department's so-called collaborative review of the department, which launched in February in response to fatal police shootings in the city that sparked angry demonstrations.

"This report makes clear the significant challenges that lie ahead for the police department and the city," Ronald Davis, director of the Justice Department's Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, said in a statement.

The findings echo a report released by a panel of judges in July that found black and Hispanic people were more likely to be searched without their consent by officers than whites and Asians.

The San Francisco Police Department in a statement highlighted areas where the review did not find deficiencies, saying, for instance, the assessment found the department's use of force "proportionate." But the department did say it agreed with several of the findings of bias.

Take The Foot Health Checkup

- My toenails are streaked, discolored and thickened.
- The sides of my toenails dig into the skin and hurt.
- I have a large bump behind my big toe (or little toe) which is always red.
- I get an extremely painful "cramp" in the area of my third and fourth toes when wearing shoes.
- My toes aren't straight—they are all cocked-up, bent and hurt.
- I have painful calluses on the ball of my foot which keep building up.
- I have corns on my toes which get thick no matter what shoe size I wear.
- The bottom of my heel hurts all day, but it's worse when I step out of bed in the morning.
- I have cramps in my legs which always happen when I walk the same distance.
- My ankles are swollen most of the time.
- My feet are always dry and scaly—sometimes they itch.
- My feet just hurt all over when I stand or walk a lot.
- I have numbness, burning, infection, persistent pain, skin rash, or open sores.

Job openings hit eight-month low, labor market still strong

U.S. job openings fell to an eight-month low in August and hiring was little changed, suggesting some easing in labor market conditions amid an aging economic recovery.

Still, details of the Labor Department's monthly Job Openings and Labor Turnover Survey (JOLTS) report published on Wednesday continued to point to a solid jobs market, with a steady rise in the number of people voluntarily quitting their jobs and declining layoffs.

Job openings, a measure of labor demand, declined 388,000 to a seasonally adjusted 5.4 million, the lowest level since December, after surging to a record high in July. That pushed down the jobs openings rate three-tenths of a percentage point to 3.6 percent, also the lowest reading since December.

"These data can be volatile and the openings rate is still fairly high, so it is too early to tell whether this is a signal or just the noise of volatile monthly data," said John Ryding, chief economist at RDQ Economics in New York.

Job fair. GETTY IMAGES

"However, if this drop is sustained, it could be a sign of increased caution on the part of businesses."

The JOLTS report is one of the job market metrics on Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen's so-called dashboard. Fed officials view the labor market as being at or near full employment.

The U.S. central bank is widely expected to increase interest rates in December, having kept borrowing costs steady over the course of the year because of persistently low inflation. REUTERS

UN rights chief: Trump as president would pose global danger

U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights Zeid Ra'ad al Hussein cited Trump's views on vulnerable communities including minorities and his talk of authorizing torture in interrogations, banned under international law, as "deeply unsettling and disturbing."

Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump GETTY IMAGES

The world will be in danger if Republican nominee Donald Trump becomes president of the United States, the top United Nations human rights official said on Wednesday.

"If Donald Trump is elected on the basis of what he has said already — and unless that changes — I think it is without any doubt that he would be dangerous from an international point of view," Zeid told a news briefing in Geneva.

Trump lashed out at House Speaker Paul Ryan and other "disloyal" Republicans on Tuesday and vowed to campaign in whatever style he wants now that the party establishment has largely abandoned him. This occurred after a 2005 video surfaced last week showing him bragging crudely about groping women and making unwanted sexual advances.

Trump has said he pact ratified by Washington, or to vulnerable groups possibly losing their basic rights, he had to speak out.

In a speech in The Hague last month, Zeid accused Trump of spreading "humiliating racial and religious prejudice" and warned of a rise of populist politics that could turn violent.

"I always believe that it's incumbent on leaders to lead and to lead in a way that is ethical and moral," Zeid said on Wednesday, when asked about Trump. "The use of half-truths is a very clever political device. Because as every propagandist knows, you allow the listener to fill in the rest."

Trump has portrayed himself as tough on national security and promised to build a wall to stop Mexican immigrant "rapists" from crossing the border.

"We have to be on guard to see that in the end vulnerable populations, populations at risk do not again see their rights deprived because of a view that is in the ascendancy based on false premises," Zeid said. REUTERS

Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump escalated his attacks on House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan on Wednesday, deepening a fracture in the party with only four weeks to go until the Nov. 8 election.

Trump, at a rally before thousands of supporters jammed into a livestock arena in Ocala,

Florida, also attempted to drive voters away from Democratic rival Hillary Clinton with an overwhelmingly negative speech in which he described her as corrupt and unqualified for the presidency.

Ryan said on Monday he was no longer going to campaign for or defend Trump and advised House Republicans not to support the White House candidate if they did not want to. His move followed outcry over a video that surfaced last Friday showing Trump bragging in 2005 about groping women and making unwanted sexual advances.

Trump's response to being abandoned by Ryan, the country's most senior elected Republican, has veered between saying he feels free now to campaign on his own terms and assailing Ryan and other "disloyal" Republicans.

US officials believe Connecticut plane crash was intentional

The plane slammed into a utility pole and burst into flames on Tuesday, killing a flight student aboard and leaving an instructor with serious burns.

The U.S. National Transportation Safety Board said on Wednesday it believes a small plane crash in East Hartford, Connecticut, was due to an intentional act and is transferring the investigation to the FBI.

The plane slammed into a utility pole and burst into flames on Tuesday, killing a flight student aboard and leaving an instructor with serious burns.

In a press release, the NTSB said its initial investigation indicated that the crash was "the result of an intentional act."

A U.S. national security official identified the student as Feras Freitekh. Federal Aviation Administration records showed he lived in Orland Hills, Illinois, a suburb of Chicago, and earned a private pilot certificate last year.

National Transportation Safety Board GETTY IMAGES

The security official, who requested anonymity to discuss the ongoing investigation, said law enforcement would look into whether Freitekh had ties to terrorism. The official said Freitekh was not known to U.S. intelligence.

Transportation Secretary Anthony Foxx declined to say if the crash was an act of terrorism. The FBI "is going to dig into the facts," he told reporters on Wednesday.

The instructor and Freitekh were the only people aboard the plane when it crashed at about 3:30 p.m. EDT (1930 GMT) on Tuesday during flight training that originated at the Hartford-Brainard Airport, local police said.

The instructor, who has not been identified, is being treated at the Bridgeport Hospital's burn center, according to East Hartford Mayor Marcia Leclerc.

The New York Times, citing unnamed federal officials, reported that the instructor had told investigators that Freitekh deliberately crashed the plane.

East Hartford Police Lieutenant Joshua Litwin said at a news conference on Wednesday that the plane had two sets of controls, but that he did not know which person was flying the plane at the time of the crash.

Rights groups: More arrests for pot than violent crimes

U.S. police make over 1.25 million arrests a year for drug possession, more than twice the number for violent crimes, and about half of the arrests are for marijuana, two human rights groups said on Wednesday in a call for sweeping drug decriminalization.

The 196-page report by the American Civil Liberties Union and Human Rights Watch said the "war on drugs" was a failure, with rates of drug use unchanged since President Richard Nixon launched the campaign more than 40 years ago.

States and the federal government should decriminalize the use and possession of drugs for personal use and focus instead on prevention and reducing harm, the report said.

"These wide-scale arrests have destroyed countless lives while doing nothing to help people who struggle with dependence," Tess Borden, the report's author, said in a statement.

The report said nearly half of all drug possession arrests in 2015, or more than 574,000, were for marijuana, based on Federal Bureau of Investigation figures.

In the same year, there were 506,000 arrests for violent crimes such as murder, rape and aggravated assault, FBI data showed. Four times as many people are arrested for possessing drugs than distributing them, the report said.

Even though whites are more likely than black people to use illicit drugs in the course of their lives, adult African-Americans are more than 2.5 times more likely to be arrested for drug possession, the report said. REUTERS

US officials: Navy destroyer again targeted by missiles from Yemen

The incidents, along with an Oct. 1 strike on a vessel from the United Arab Emirates, add to questions about safety of passage for military ships around the Bab al-Mandab Strait, one of the world's busiest shipping routes.

A U.S. Navy destroyer was targeted on Wednesday in a failed missile attack from territory in Yemen controlled by Iran-aligned Houthi rebels, the second such incident in the past four days, U.S. officials told Reuters.

The USS Mason, which was accompanied by the USS Ponce — an amphibious transport dock — fired defensive salvos in response to the missiles, neither of which hit the ship or caused any damage as it operated north of the Bab al-Mandab Strait, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The renewed attempt to target the U.S. Navy destroyer will add pressure on the U.S. military to retaliate, a move that would represent the first direct U.S. military action against Houthis in Yemen's conflict. The Pentagon hinted about possible retaliatory strikes on Tuesday.

The Houthis, who are battling the internationally-recognized government of Yemen President Abd Rabbu Mansour al-Hadi, denied any involvement in the previous attempt to strike the USS Mason or the nearby USS Ponce on

The guided-missile destroyer USS Mason GETTY IMAGES

Sunday.

But U.S. officials have told Reuters there is growing indications that Houthi rebels, despite those denials, were responsible for Sunday's incident.

The rebels appeared to use small skiffs as spotters to help direct the missile attack on the warship. The United States is also investigating the possibility that a radar station under Houthi control in Yemen might have also "painted" the USS Mason, something that would have helped the Houthi fighters pass along coordinates for a strike, the officials have said.

The Houthis, who are allied to Hadi's predecessor Ali Abdullah Saleh, have the support of many army units and control most of the north including the capital Sanaa.

Reuters has learned that the coastal defense cruise missiles used against the USS Mason on Sunday had considerable range, adding to concerns about the kind of heavy weaponry that the Houthis appear willing to employ and some of which U.S. officials believe is supplied by Iran.

Drownings push hurricane death toll to 19 in flooded NC

Officials in North Carolina said they would go door to door urging people to leave low-lying areas as rivers swollen by rainfall from Hurricane Matthew continue to rise, threatening homes and resulting in more drownings.

Floodwaters have swamped areas across the central and eastern part of the state, forcing more than 3,800 residents to flee to shelters, closing down stretches of major interstate highways and shuttering 34 school systems, North Carolina Gov. Pat McCrory said.

McCrory said the death toll in the state had risen to 19, mostly due to drowning. That figure represents more than half of the deaths in the U.S. Southeast linked to the fierce Atlantic storm, which killed some 1,000 people in Haiti and displaced hundreds of thousands more as it tore through the Caribbean last week.

"Do not get near the water," McCrory said at a news conference in Raleigh. "It will kill you."

Matthew's aftermath drew comparisons to Hurricane Floyd, which triggered devastating floods in North Carolina in 1999 and caused more than $3 billion in damages in the state. REUTERS

Joe Jonas reveals that he lost his virginity to Ashley Greene

Long gone are the days of the Disney Channel and "Camp Rock" for Joe Jonas. The 27-year-old middle Jonas brother, who now leads DNCE, got real in a Reddit AMA (ask me anything), maybe even too real. He shared personal details about losing his virginity to actress Ashley Greene and desperately trashing his drummer's room to find condoms for the um, sacred ... event. "It's quite the great story because I didn't have any condoms, so I went to our drummer Jack's room, who was my roommate at the time and I demolished his room looking for them." The couple had begun dating in 2010.

Greene apparently wasn't amused by Joe's little stroll down mem-

False alarm! Shia LaBeouf didn't actually get married

We were all pretty confused earlier this week when learned that Shia LaBeouf had taken to a Las Vegas chapel, complete with an Elvis impersonator, to marry Mia Goth. We get not having an extravagant wedding, but we weren't thinking full polyester officiant, either.

Well, it may have all been a sham anyway because Nevada's Clark County, which covers Vegas, just tweeted that it has no marriage on file for the couple. It says that a commitment ceremony was performed at the chapel—not exactly a wedding. So this was obviously either another one of LaBeouf's grand publicity stunts or just the couple's idea of a fun date night.

Janet Jackson (finally) confirms pregnancy

Janet Jackson hasn't kept her intentions to grow her family a secret, per se. The 50-year-old singer made it very clear in a selfie video that she would be canceling her Unbreakable tour because she and her husband were planning a family.

It worked! And although her brother Tito spilled the beans in June that Janet was pregnant, and her baby bump made a debut a few weeks ago as she shopped for baby furniture, we're just now hearing it straight from the source.

Donald Glover is a dad, who knew?

The evidence was right in front of us. In January, there were pictures of "Atlanta" creator and star Donald Glover with a very pregnant mystery girlfriend in Hawaii, and in May a picture of the couple pushing a stroller around New York made the rounds. But there wasn't a peep from 33-year-old Donald Glover about becoming a father.

Well, there still isn't, but a source confirmed with US Weekly that the actor, producer and rapper did indeed welcome a bundle of joy earlier this year. We still have no idea when this happened, or what the baby's name is, but we're happy for him! Clearly the former "Community" star takes his privacy seriously, a mature move for someone whose stage name is Childish Gambino.

Parker Posey loves the sweet weirdos

The legend talks about doing another Christopher Guest mockumentary with "Mascots."

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Hard to believe it's been 20 years since Parker Posey's first Christopher Guest movie. Back when she was the queen of indies, the actress' packed résumé included "Waiting for Guffman," the first time since "This is Spinal Tap" that Guest made an entirely improvised mockumentary. Posey's been in every Guest film since, including "Best in Show," "A Mighty Wind," "For Your Consideration" and the new "Mascots." This time the subculture of sweet eccentrics in some silly competition are people who dress up in ridiculous costumes to pep up sporting events. This includes Posey's Cindi, whose mascot is a robotic armadillo who dances to arty electronica.

These are comedies, but since you're basically coming up with everything yourself, it seems like you have to take these as seriously as you would a drama.

It's a very intense and focused process. You have to essentially write your character's dialogue. There's a lot of collaboration with the person you're acting with, which in my case was Susan Yeagley, who plays my half-sister. It's a very intimate, caring, generous process. You really feel like you're portraying the full life of someone.

Are you still nervous

Parker Posey plays Cindi, a mascot whose shtick is dressing as a robotic armadillo, in Christopher Guest's "Mascots," hitting Netflix Instant today. SCOTT GARFIELD/NETFLIX

Things change

Guest has always been able to make these movies outside of Hollywood. But I worry about indies these days, since the budgets have been drained out of them. The market is drying up.

It's been happening for a few years now. There's more money going into marketing than into material. There's nothing you can do about it. You just have to change and be aware of that. And you know, I can speak for the actors who don't get paid. If I can't get paid, can I sell watches? Can I sell scarves? Actors need ad campaigns now. It's changed.

going in front of his cameras, to do whatever you've prepared? You're scared every time. You show up and you really feel like you're flying without a net. But I compare it to playing music. You can feel a really good vibe on these movies. The humor, it really doesn't make fun of anyone. It's not mean. It comes from a kind place. In all his movies, we care. We care about these subcultures: the dog shows, small town theater, mascots.

You have to think through everything, including the costume and the character's history. How did you put together Cindi?

I imagined that she studied dance in college. Then she finds the all-female basketball team at Amelia Earhart College for Women. She asks, "Is there a mascot here? I want to be one." And it's a nine-banded armadillo, which is very armored, almost metallic. That led to me thinking [her music would be] techno-electronica: Kraftwerk, Gary Numan, Laurie Anderson, all stuff from the '70s and '80s. I just imagined why she would maintain this desire, over 25 years, to get out on the basketball court and perform for not very many people, and still have this be important to her. Here, she has the chance to be recognized for something that's important to her. She's only left town once. It was a lot of prep, but I think you can tell. Audiences can tell there's a particular level of investment and openness in Chris' movies.

Shoulder Arthritis Treatments Keeping Boomers Active Into Their 60's, 70's Even 80's?

If you suffer with painful shoulder arthritis – science may have finally found the answer you've been looking for.

Here is why: Researchers have discovered an natural gel like medicine that is like "joint oil." This all-natural gel is one of the naturally occurring lubricating substances in your shoulder joint that cushions and lubricates the joint which dries out over time due to wear-and-tear, age or injury. But when doctors precisely place this lubricating gel into your shoulder joint by using advanced digital imaging technology – it is like putting oil on a rusty door hinge. It lubricates the joint and can decrease pain and stiffness. For some, results can be dramatic and last for months. Years for some. Often times shoulder surgery can be avoided.

Know this: This is NOT a supplement you can buy over the counter or on the internet. This is a REAL medical treatment that must be given by a trained health care professional.

Most Insurance Plans Cover These Treatments: Most Union Plans 1199 GHI Work Comp Aetna, Cigna United Health Care (in or out of network) Empire Plan Empire BC BS Medicare AARP United Health Care Oxford ... and others

And the great news is: There is a free report and information kit available that tells you everything you need to know about this treatment. It also tells you all about cutting-edge medical clinics right here in New York City that are offering this cutting-edge treatment with tremendous success.

To get your information kit or to schedule a No-Obligation Risk Free Shoulder Screening simply call 800-627-PAIN (7246).

I didn't want to do this. I didn't want to do another damn story about the Trump tapes. But I just couldn't let it pass, not when friends and strangers were posting stories about their sexual assaults for the first time after hearing him. I've shared mine before, so that's not what I'm writing about.

I'm sure almost any woman reading this has experienced something similar. Considering the frequency with which it happens, I don't think I'm generalizing. You've read a zillion stories by now about Donald Trump bragged to former "Access Hollywood" host Billy Bush about kissing women without their consent and grabbing them by their genitalia.

You've also probably read a bunch of responses defending Trump, dismissing it as locker room talk and no big deal. For someone who frequently writes about dragons and people with superpowers, believe me, this is the far more fantastical statement.

Or is it? I couldn't believe what I was watching this weekend at the debate. A man who thinks he's qualified to run the country said talking about women that way — in a professional setting, no less — and joking about sexual assault was no big deal.

I have read comment after comment about how we should just "deal with it," because that's what men are like. I refuse to believe that, despite my past and the pasts of many women in the world. We should strive to be better than our baser natures.

You know what? I love chocolate. I love salt. I think chocolate-covered pretzels are the perfect food. I want to eat them all day long. But you know what? I don't get to, because there are consequences. I don't get to punch the hell out of that guy who I just saw cut in front of an old lady in line. I don't get to. I can talk to him, but I don't get to punch him, as satisfying as that would be. Sure, I have freedom of action and speech, but there are consequences to both of those things. Or there should be.

You know why? We tell kids that they can do or be anything. We hold up becoming president one day as the example of the highest goal they can achieve. Our kids look up to the president. When I was a kid, I was excited to hear about President Reagan. I knew nothing about his politics and completely disagree with them as an adult, but as a kid, I looked up to him.

If Trump gets elected, there are going to be kids who look up to him, too. This behavior of his? Bragging about sexually assaulting women, blatantly lying about things that are right there on Twitter or recorded by cameras? These things become acceptable. As someone who has spent years dealing with nightmares about my assault, like almost every woman I know, I beg you to see reason. This is no longer about politics. This is about the future. This is not a role model. This is a monster.

What to see at Open House NY

The annual event unlocks magnificent spaces all over the city.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn kate.mooney@metro.us

We can all agree New York is one of the most dynamic cities in the world, yet it's incredibly easy to get stuck in a routine of going to the same places all the time — from apartment to office to bodega to gym, then back to your couch. This weekend, the 14th annual Open House New York will give you the chance to peek beyond your day-to-day haunts. By opening the doors to more than 250 sites across all five boroughs, from historic event halls to repurposed industrial warehouses, OHNY shines a light on the amazing architectural feats in this city.

With so many sights to see, how do you get started? We highlighted a few picks. All are free and open to the public.

The United Palace of Cultural Arts

4140 Broadway, Washington Heights
Once a 1930s vaudeville house, then home to a '60s black televangelical congregation, and today, a performance hall for the likes of Bob Dylan and Adele and a popular filming location for productions from Netflix's "Luke Cage" to Woody Allen's "Cafe Society," the United Palace of Cultural Arts has had many lives. Experience them all while gawking at the ornate interior, which resembles a jacked-up version of Wes Anderson's Grand Budapest Hotel.

Open Saturday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tours at 11, noon and 1 p.m.

A/D/O

29 Norman Ave., Greenpoint
At the official OHNY launch party tonight, you can get a sneak peek of A/D/O, the design space opening later this year in a 23,000-square-foot warehouse. For those who can't make the (ticketed) launch tonight but still want to check out the space, A/D/O will be free and open to the public Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., with tours at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

70 Pine

Financial District
The eighth-tallest building in New York, 70 Pine was first built in the 1930s and has since been renovated to include residential apartments, a hotel and retail shops. On Saturday and Sunday, tours beginning every 15 to 20 minutes from noon to 4 p.m. will take you inside the art deco lobby, an official NYC landmark, as well as a model apartment.

Brooklyn Army Terminal

140 58th St., Sunset Park
First constructed in 1918 as a military supply facility, the massive industrial space in Sunset Park is now home to over 100 commercial tenants. On Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m., visitors will be able to peek into a dozen artist studios as well as walk through the awesome atrium. Guided tours offered every hour on the hour.

Battery Weed

120 New York Ave., Staten Island
Up for a leisurely Staten Island ferry ride this weekend? This Saturday, from noon to 4 p.m., visit Fort Wadsworth's Battery Weed, a massive granite sea wall on a bluff overlooking the New York Harbor. Very dramatic. Tours at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.
Visit Ohny.org for more information.

Dogs on film

The Dog Film Festival returns this weekend with short films and features all about dogs.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

The New York City-born Dog Film Festival wags back into town this weekend with movies to remind you why they're man's best friend.

When she started the festival last year, founder (and "Dog Talk" radio show host) Tracie Hotchner wanted to bring people together for a "shared, almost a spiritual experience of seeing and feeling something in a roomful of people having a similar experience."

What she thought would be a few dog films turned out to be thousands, and the festival has been held in 11 cities, arriving back where it began at Symphony Space this Saturday.

If you go

Dog Film Festival
Oct. 15, 11 a.m., 2, 5, 8 p.m.
Symphony Space
2537 Broadway
$15 per session
dogfilmfestival.com

Hotchner chose shorts, documentaries, animated films and movies that celebrate the human-canine bond. "The festival is a unique way of honoring dogs as true family members," she says. "It's all about love. Love changes everything."

Films are divided into four themed sessions (each is separately ticketed) that run about two hours: Dogs British Style, Dogs in the Outdoors, Love Makes the World Go 'Round and The Champions. Each is made up of largely shorts leading into a feature-length production, and half of festival proceeds will benefit the Alliance for NYC's Animals, which will be bringing adoptable dogs to the festival. (Attendees' dogs are unfortunately not allowed inside the theater, but Hotchner promises to bring back the Pooch Party next year.)

"Wonder Dog" COURTESY OF THE FILMMAKER

There's plenty of goofy fun, like "One Man and His Dog" about a duo who go everywhere together, usually on a skateboard, in their small Australian town. In "Sniff," two British staffers at a San Francisco dog hotel dress up as canine concierges to raise funds for their dog documentary. "It's the strangest, most wonderful movie," she says, describing it as "a cross between 'Best in Show' and 'Monty Python.'"

The devotion on both sides is poignantly told in films like "Dear Captain," in which a war veteran pays tribute to the dog from K-9s for Warriors that saved his life. In "Pete the Dog," aspiring filmmaker Benita Raphan struggles to help her adopted pet who can't stand the bustle of New York City because he had grown up in a puppy mill. (Don't worry, even the tear-jerkers have a happy ending!)

Dogs can also be oddly human. "Dogs: Guilty of Jealousy," shot from unusual angles like beneath a water bowl, reveals that "when we think our dog is guilty, that's not guilt, that's appeasement," says Hotchner. When things get tough though, you know who's got your back.

Haunted Hayride

Randalls Island Park was turned into a garden of fear for the first time last year, and this time Haunted Hayride brings even more scares with two new zones: House of Shadows, a pitch-black experience; and Theater Macabre, which brings iconic horror film scenes to life, with you as the star. There's also a haunted village for food and drinks, plus more spine-tingling performances.

"This Is Real"

Fans of the David Fincher thriller "The Game," listen up. Only two tickets are sold to each session of "This Is Real," an hour-long "extreme hide-and-seek" immersive theater production starring you — in your own kidnapping. Created by Psycho Clan, who put on the long-running Nightmare haunted house, the experience begins with you watching another victim's horrific fate — a preview of what will happen to you if you don't escape.

for high-concept blood-curdling scares. The new residents of the 5,000-square-foot maze include the soul-sucking ghoul named Boki and Maude the cannibal. The last two hours of every night are general admission, in case you're in the neighborhood and feel like screaming, and express passes ($15) are back. For the really daring, they turn out the lights on the last two days and you're left to walk through only with a glowstick.

Doomocracy

Nothing in any of this year's haunted houses can compare to the dystopia that is the American landscape, out of which political artist Pedro Reyes has crafted Doomocracy, an interactive house of haunts. Much of the anxious display is drawn from the presidential election, but gun violence and climate change (among many others) also get their turn. Who needs actors jumping out at you when you've got this kind of psychological horror to haunt your everyday life? The free tickets were all claimed hours after the project was announced, but they're working on releasing more.

This hotel may look like the old Victorian mansions from the turn of the 20th century, but behind the scenes is some serious state-of-the-art scare technology.

Produced by Theatreworks, a CUNY performance tech troupe, this experimental house is a testing ground for the latest in low- and high-tech scares, with effects like moving objects and visual effects triggered as you walk through.

Horseman's Hollow

Sleepy Hollow may be just another quaint little hamlet the rest of the year, but every October Washington Irving's Headless Horseman is let out to roam once again. The power of your imagination alone will get you pretty far in freaking yourself out, but there's plenty of real haunts, too, chief among them the Horseman's Hollow. Walk the trail through a town driven mad by the Horseman to the 300-year-old Philipsburg Manor, home to witches, vampires and ghosts — all servants of the legend himself!

HOT PLATE

The dessert ramen fantasy is now a reality

Eva Kis eats her way through New York
eva.kis@metro.us

Ramen as a dessert is the improbable concept has taken over Instagram.

Served, appropriately, by Greenwich Village's The Dessert Kitchen, which began in Hong Kong and serves traditional treats created all over Asia, it's called Ice Stream Ramen. The electric blue strands aren't actual noodles — they're made of a seaweed extract called kanten, mixed with sugar and water. (Don't worry, there's nothing briny about the taste, which the staff describes as "citrus" but I call vaguely fruity.)

The dish gets a cold "broth" of evaporated milk poured over shaved ice, with a garnish of freshly scooped honeydew melon, chunks of mango, a handful of mochi pearls and a sidecar of white peach syrup to pour over it all.

Now, you may see a magical pastel dish that could've come from "My Little Pony," but my brain needed a moment to recognize it as food. Once I got past that, Ice Stream Ramen is a surprise of textures and flavors. The "noodles" can be slurped just like the real thing but have the consistency of overcooked pasta (the sturdy mochi helps). The broth was, alas, a watery disappointment, with the shaved ice somehow both melting into the milk and solidifying into little icebergs. The peach syrup and fruits are the only real flavor in an otherwise mildly sweet haze. It's a fun idea, but better on Instagram than in real life.

Things have gotten very busy at Padoca Bakery. The Upper East Side shop's signature pastry, the savory Brazilian cheese puff called pão de queijo, is the bread of the month at Eataly Downtown, and that's got pastry chef Rachel Binder working overtime. "We upped production threefold," she says.

The bite-size treats, which are just called PDQ at the bakery, began with a family recipe from her Brazilian business partner Marina Halpern. It took months of experimenting with various cheeses and flours — and rigorous taste-testing by Brazilian expats — to find the right ingredients. (The final version is made with gluten-free cassava flour.)

We caught up with Binder to get her favorite spots around the city when she has time to leave the kitchen again.

I was actually there last night: Hummus Place. There's one right in my neighborhood and it's one of my favorite things to eat all the time. It's super cheap to just

Late night

For drinks, Maialino. I used to work there, and I love the cocktails and wine list. They do have a late-night menu, usually with a burger — it's a very well-kept secret. Gramercy Park Hotel, 2 Lexington Ave.

Date night

I don't stay up late, so often it's lunch instead of dinner. I love Del Posto (11 Madison Ave., Chelsea) for lunch — they have the prix fixe menu that's a great option, and I think it's very romantic. For dinner, Eleven Madison Park (11 Madison Ave., Flatiron) if you're really gonna splurge.

Good for a group

Either RedFarm (2170 Broadway) or Kefi (505 Columbus Ave.) on the Upper West Side, they have really great Greek food. It's fairly inexpensive, and there are a lot of vegetarian and meat options.

Solo dining

I love to eat at the bar at Gramercy Tavern, especially on my days off. It's very intimate, they take really good care of you, and the food is always delicious. 42 E. 20th St.

Favorite bar

There's a tiny wine bar in my neighborhood, on the Upper West Side, called Riposo 72. They have a really nice wine list, and if you're hungry there's always good stuff to eat, too. 50 W. 72nd St.

Hidden gem

We just got the new Blue Ribbon restaurant, The Ribbon. People don't know about their new location yet, which is awesome for me because it's not super crowded. 20 W. 72nd St.

NEW OPENING

Lux dine-in theater comes to the Seaport

NYC's growing dine-in movie theater scene has a new addition.

South Florida-based iPic Theaters has brought its first luxury bar-lounge-theater in the city to South Street Seaport. The company's ethos is "the only reason people stop going to movie theaters is because the experience isn't good enough," so they've revamped every part of it for comfort, privacy and style.

Here are our impressions from last week's press preview:

The vibe: The lobby looks more like the entrance to a lounge, with low lighting and mood music, where you'll also find the first of several murals —

Doomocracy WILL STAR, SHOOTING STARS PRO

hallways in iPic theaters are called "galleries."

The food/drinks: Popcorn is free(!) and finger food options (to eliminate noise from clicking utensils) like steak sliders and a deconstructed tuna roll are made on-site from a menu created by Wolfgang Puck veteran Sherry Yard.

There's also a full bar with an extensive wine menu. Upstairs on the third floor is Tuck Room, a full-service restaurant and bar.

The seats: iPic has eight screening rooms, and you choose your (spacious!) seats when you purchase tickets in either the Premium ($16) or Premium

Plus ($27) sections. Premium seats are closer to the screen, do not recline and are self-service, while the Premium Plus section is full service and made up of two-person pods that "offer intimacy without a sound barrier." This is not just hype: We found the pods' walls high enough to allow for cellphone use and even conversation without disturbing others. The pods also have a button to summon "ninja servers" anytime during the film (downside: orders are taken verbally). The pod seats recline fairly far (and also have a leg rest), and come with a pillow and blanket. Yes, people do fall asleep, but the staff will rouse them if alerted. B

Suck the marrow out of NYC Wine & Food Fest

Don't just take a bite, feel satisfied at the end of the year's biggest food event.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Setting a food festival in New York City may seem a bit redundant. Food has become a hobby worldwide, but here, it's reached full-blown obsession. So what does the New York City Wine & Food Festival, returning Oct. 13-16, have for you? Plenty — with nearly 100 events (each individually ticketed), it's easy to get indigestion just looking at all of the options. But loosen your belts, because we're about to hack the NYCWFF experience.

You're here to party

At its heart, NYCWFF is a celebration. To be sure, there are serious dinners with serious chefs, but the festival is really about grabbing your friends and being as loud, indulgent and happy as you want to be. Blue Moon Burger Bash lives up to its name, with 32 chefs grilling up their best burgers (and some choice sides and desserts) while live bands amp up the atmosphere. You probably won't make it through every stall on the massive Pier 92 rooftop, especially while sampling the free-flowing brews, wine and spirits. $225, Oct. 14, 7 p.m., 52nd Street and West Side Highway

Expand your culinary horizons

Deuki Hong and his crew at Kang Ho Dong Baekjeong launched Korean food into the lime-light last year from its quiet home just off Herald Square. But when you venture into Koreatown, you're probably still ordering the hot pot and short ribs, shying away from the rest of the extensive menus that offer little in the way of explanation. Koreatown Eats is your chance to get to know this vibrant cuisine during, appropriately, a late-night K-pop party that promises "plenty of Gangnam style" with authentic dishes and riffs like kimchi cheese ramen, alongside cocktails and karaoke. $95, Oct. 15, 10 p.m., Union Fare, 7 E. 17th St.

What makes it a Grand Tasting?

Glad you asked. If you're more into entertaining at home, the festival has you covered, too. Get a sneak taste of what's coming to grocery stores, try seasonal treats and totally new-to-you international condiments, and watch the same big-name chefs cooking at special dinners do culinary demos (and try their dishes!) at the Grand Tasting, which takes over Pier 94 over the weekend. Oh, and this is where you'll find dozens of wine, cider, bubbly, hard liquor and other producers — they conveniently hand you a wine glass necklace at the entrance for sampling. $185, noon-6 p.m., 55th Street and West Side Highway

The deal of the fest

NYCWFF ticket sales support No Kid Hungry, which is fantastic, but even one event (let alone more) will set you back a few dinners. For the best bites-for-your-buck deal, check out the new Harvest Party. The walk-around tasting of all things fall features a massive lineup of 21 chefs like Keedick Coulter of the cult hit Bobwhite and the Franks of Frankies Spuntino serving everything squash, apple, turkey and more, alongside wine, beer, cocktails and live music. At just $110 it's half the cost of Burger Bash, and you can even bring a vegetarian as your +1. Oct. 15, noon-3 p.m., Highline Stages, 440 W. 15th St.

It's A Haunted Halloween With Hornblower

WRITTEN &

HORNBLOWER
EVENTS

See the scary sights of New York City from the Water Aboard A Halloween Happy Hour Cruise

Did you know New York is known as the most haunted city in the world? Around the city there are hundreds of old buildings and locations believed to be haunted. It's not hard to believe given the city's history and its many, many stories.

But often we forget about New York Harbor, also steeped in history with its own stories of hauntings, ghouls, ghosts and more.

This makes the water the perfect place to spend Halloween. And Hornblower can help add the scares to the season with boo's cruises and spooktacular party cruises all weekend from Pier 15 at South Street Seaport.

Hornblower's Alive After Five happy hour cruise will be specially decked out for Halloween. There'll be creepy cocktails, wicked wine and bone chilling beer. Just to make sure you keep the nerves at bay (or is that harbor?!) you can purchase a Walk the Plank Ticket with beer, wine and soda included along with bar snacks.

Alive After Five Happy Hour Cruise All Halloween Weekend

Boards at 5pm and cruises from 6-8pm Thursday-Sunday. Cruise starts at $25.

Alive After Five isn't just for frightful sights, the cruise also takes you past New York's iconic landmarks including the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, pass beneath the Brooklyn Bridge and watch the city skyline light up as the sun sets. And you'll be kept entertained as the onboard DJ provides the sounds.

Hornblower has specialty cruises throughout the holidays including a Thanksgiving dinner cruise. Leave the cooking and cleaning to someone else and take the family out for a Thanksgiving to remember.

Treat out-of-town friends and family to a festive holiday lunch or dinner cruise. It's the best way to catch up and celebrate the holidays.

'Tis the season to be cruising!

YOUR WEEKEND STARTS NOW

BOOKS

'Show and Tell'

You do not want to come up against Ken Bloom in a theater category during a trivia game. The man who chronicles the highs and lows of the Great White Way has just released another book: "Show and Tell: The New Book of Broadway Anecdotes." He'll discuss it with theater critic Peter Filichia at the Drama Book Shop, followed by a signing. The audience will have the chance to come up and share their own favorite theater memories. Free, Oct. 13, 5 p.m., 250 W. 40th St., dramabookshop.com

'Good Clean Fun'

"Parks and Rec" star Nick Offerman is making an appearance next Tuesday in Williamsburg (which, we feel, would make him somewhat of a disappointment to Ron Swanson). He'll be signing his latest book at Artists & Fleas, "Good Clean Fun," which continues his trademark guidance on manhood and how to handle your woodworking tools. Tickets include a hardcover and an Artists & Fleas tote bag. $38, Oct. 18, 7:30 p.m., 70 N. Seventh St., Brooklyn, wordbookstores.com

HALLOWEEN

H.P. Lovecraft
Festival

In its eighth year of spine-tingling terror, this fest fleshes out the old-fashioned thrills of radio theater with nightmarish stories from one of horror's greatest masterminds. Radio Theatre is renowned for their stage shows using talented voice actors, original scores and awesome sound effects. This year offers eight stories, including "The Call of Cthulu," "The Unnameable," "The Lurking Fear" and "The Beast in the Cave." Tickets are likely to sell out. $30, Oct. 13-30, Kraine Theatre, 85 E. Fourth St., horsetrade.info

DRINKS

Craft Beer Festival

Drink your way through over 150 beers, ciders and meads provided by 75 breweries (many of them local) at one of three sessions over the course of two days at the NYC Craft Beer Festival. Home brewers can also check out the latest tech, attend seminars and play games while meeting the masters behind your favorite brews. There's live entertainment and, for the first time this year, a pavilion dedicated to spirits.

VIPs get access to the Speakeasy Bar. $45-$85, Oct. 14-15, Lexington Avenue Armory, 68 Lexington Ave., nycraft-beerfest.com

CABARET

Pants Velour

For one last night, midnight at Joe's Pub belongs to modern cabaret group Pants Velour. Their performance combines hip-hop, rap and soul stylings with theatrical and visual arts elements. Interspersed between hot numbers like "Got to Lose" and "Trapeze," the group also shares anecdotes (ranging from silly to intellectual) and performs short sketches for an all-around cabaret centered on their original live music. $15, Oct. 14, midnight, Joe's Pub, 425 Lafayette St., joespub.com

THEATER

Dirty Work at the
Wax Works

Coney Island is all about the strange and unusual all year round, so you can expect great things from the beachside Brooklyn crew come Halloween. This year, the presidential election gets a zombie makeover with spooky wax figures and a maybe-crazy night watchman who might appear during your tour to offer his unbidden insights. All tickets are $15 except the Opening Night Benefit on Friday, which is $50. Oct. 14-31, Sideshows at the Seashore, 1208 Surf Ave., coneyisland.com

'How to Write a Musical That Works'

How does a musical go from an amazing idea to Broadway? Theater Resources Unlimited hosts three workshops to teach all you aspiring Lin-Manuel Mirandas the ropes, with the first part kicking off Sunday. While directors, producers and theater pros discuss the creation process, 10 writing groups will work on concepts to present to the audience. You'll have the chance to watch the workshop, participate in discussions, enjoy refreshments and give vital feedback on the results. $55, Oct. 16, 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Nola Studios, 250 W. 54th St., 11th Floor, truonline.org

Applefest

If you have neither the funds, time or driver's license to go apple-picking, Hudson Valley comes to you at Applefest. Back for its second year, the festival brings 6,000 of the best apples from the region to Pier A Harbor House in Battery Park City this Saturday. Choose from six varieties of apples, plus apple-themed food and drink vendors (with a full range of ciders, from sparkling to hot). Add in some games and a bluegrass band, and you've got a perfect fall afternoon in the country without leaving the city. Admission to Applefest is free, just pay for whatever looks delicious. Oct. 15, noon to 9 p.m., 22 Battery Place, piera.com

PROVIDED

FOOD

Queens
International
Night Market

The Saturday night fair of street foods is back for the month of October, and after a soggy relaunch last weekend this one's looking much better. About 40 food stalls (with nothing costing over $6) as well as artists, vendors and performers will bring a world of culture to Flushing Meadows-Corona Park. Free, Oct. 15, 6 p.m.-midnight, queens-nightmarket.com

Japan Fes
Ramen Contest

The Japan Block Fair is now Japan Fes, and the annual food-centric celebration of all things Land of the Rising Sun is bringing back its ramen contest after four long years. It was worth the wait: 12 shops, including two from Japan, are bringing all types of ramen from shoyu to tantanmen for $5 per bowl. Attendees vote for their top choices, which also enters them for a chance to win a trip to Japan (to try even more, of course). The fest will also have Japanese street food, vendors and more. If you can't make it on Sunday, there's another tasting event being held all day Monday featuring bowls of ramen from nearly all of the participating shops. Free entry, Oct. 16, 10 a.m.-6 p.m., Broadway b/w 92nd and 94th streets, Oct. 17, 11 a.m.-9 p.m., 4 W. 43rd St., japanfes.com

Balloons Over New England

Float above the rolling hills and evergreens of central Vermont as you level with the clouds. Offering views of several national parks and preserves, Balloons Over New England in Quechee organizes hot air balloon tours seven days a week, weather permitting. Hover over the scenic Lake Pinneo at altitudes so low you can watch birds chasing their breakfasts.

Napa Valley Balloons

Discover the symmetry and wonder of the vineyards of Northern California's wine country with the guides of Napa Valley Balloons. For the ultimate day in wine country, choose one of Lake Geneva Balloon Co.

Lake Geneva is a popular resort destination, named after the freshwater lake that spans about 8 square miles of southeastern Wisconsin. Located on the northern tip of the lake, the Lake Geneva Balloon Co. takes adventurers above the treetops for expansive views of the lake and the many fine homes along its shore. Pass by Big Foot Park where you can wave to swimmers and fishers just feet away, and float over the estates of the Wrigleys and the Schwinns before settling in for a smooth landing...all before breakfast.

Balloons Over Letchworth

Rise above Letchworth State Park in Castile, New York, for prime views of its 20 waterfalls and impressive gorges that reach up to 600 feet. Balloons Over Letchworth operates hot air balloon tours from April through October, with September and October noted as favorite months for the vibrant foliage. Known to many as "The Grand Canyon of the East," the natural rock formations and beautiful bridges make for an unforgettable experience.

Arizona Balloon Safaris

Just outside of Phoenix, Arizona Balloon Safaris in Cave Creek offers hot air balloon rides through the Sonoran Desert. Floating down to tree-level, the unique sunrise tour offers passengers the chance to see roadrunners and coyotes among the cactuses. The flight becomes a first-class experience as the guides provide muffins, eggs, fruit and refreshments upon landing.

Grand Adventure Balloon Tours

WILL UGLINESS CONTINUE FOR JETS AND GIANTS?

SID ROSENBERG

Sid Rosenberg co-hosts 'The Bernie and Sid Show' on WABC in New York. You can reach him on Twitter @SidRosenberg

We are now more than a quarter of the way through the 2016 NFL season and neither the Jets nor the Giants are living up to expectations.

It has been ugly to say the least through five games as the teams have accounted for three wins and seven losses with neither team recording a win since Week 2. With both teams in the cellars of their respective divisions it is time to hit the panic button and start making some changes.

Let us start with the Jets and their offense. Ryan Fitzpatrick has been awful so far, throwing five touchdowns and 10 interceptions. He owns a 60.91 quarterback rating to boot. There is no one else to blame but Fitzpatrick for his struggles.

Brandon Marshall has been his old self through five games and Quincy Enunwa has a had a breakout season playing in the slot. Matt Forte has given Fitzpatrick a safety net in the backfield and brings great balance to the offense. All the pieces are there for Fitzpatrick to succeed, yet he hasn't been able to capitalize.

As for Gang Green's defense, they have been fantastic against the run — ranking second in the league in rushing yards allowed per game — but have been the polar opposite against the pass. With Darrelle Revis returning from offseason surgery, we knew that he wasn't going to be 100 percent, but we did not expect him to be this bad. Revis has been torched multiple times this season by wideouts who he should have no problem locking down — even coming off of injury.

The Jets' defensive line has been their bright spot so far this season. Second-year man Leonard Williams has five sacks through five games and shows no signs of slowing down. Muhammad Wilkerson has anchored the defensive line, and although the numbers have not shown up in the box score he has played a vital role in stopping the run. Another bright spot for the Jets defense has been rookie linebacker Darron Lee, who leads the team with 28 tackles. He has been able to step in right away and make an impact.

The G-Men

Big Blue's offense has not been much better than the Jets' thus far and we can also look to the quarterback position for their struggles. Eli Manning has thrown more touchdowns than interceptions but his quarterback rating is an abysmal 58.74. And it is almost the same situation that Ryan Fitzpatrick is in, as Manning is surrounded by a promising core of wide receivers in Odell Beckham Jr, Victor Cruz and rookie Sterling Shepard.

But where the Giants offense has really struggled is at the running back spot. Rashad Jennings and Shane Vereen could not get it done to start the season and with Vereen now on injured reserve and Jennings proving that he can't handle the load, the Giants have deferred to Orleans Darkwa and Bobby Rainey. Rainey and Darkwa are two guys you do not want to see on the field if you're a Giants fan.

On the defensive side of the ball for the Giants it has been hard to watch. Big Blue has just four sacks and two interceptions in the season. We expected a lot more from a Giants team that brought in Olivier Vernon and Janoris Jenkins in the offseason and used their No. 1 draft pick on cornerback Eli Apple. There is really not much more to say about the Giants defense other than they have a lot of room to improve.

It has been a rough first five games for New York football fans. Let's hope both the Giants and Jets both can turn it around before it's too late.

Top detective in LAPD investigation into Rose dies

Nadine Hernandez's death is being investigated as a suicide.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

Nadine Hernandez, a lead detective in the LAPD investigation into sexual assault allegations against New York Knicks point guard Derrick Rose, died Tuesday afternoon due to a gunshot wound.

Hernandez, 44, was found severely injured with the wound at a home in Whittier, California, and died less than an hour after Whittier police received a call reporting an attempted suicide.

According to the Los Angeles Times, "Law enforcement sources said that the house where Hernandez's body was found belonged to a relative, and it appeared she had died of a single gunshot wound. ... Property records show the home was registered to a retired LAPD lieutenant."

Hernandez's death is being investigated as a suicide.

"At this time there are no signs of foul play," Whittier police said in a release. "However, this is an ongoing investigation and we will continue to collaborate with the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office as part of our investigation."

Hernandez wrote a letter to the alleged victim's lawyers in the Rose rape case just last month. Via The WhiteBronco.com:

Mr. Anand,

This note is to clarify any misconception that the Los Angeles Police Department does not have a current and open criminal investigation pending that names the suspects as the defendants in the current civil case being handled by your office. When filing the crime report, the victim in this case exercised her right to confidentiality as outlined in California Penal Code section 293.5 (a). Her identity will continue to remain confidential throughout the criminal investigation being handled by the Los Angeles Police Department.

The ability to offer anonymity to victims of sex crimes is an invaluable investigative aid to investigators as well as a great comfort to victims of crimes of such a sensitive nature.

Rose's civil sexual assault trial is currently taking place in Los Angeles and news also broke Wednesday that the judge in the trial will not declare a mistrial despite the alleged victim's lawyers having withheld three key text messages from the defense.

Aries Should you decide to get involved with a friend in something that has commercial overtones, it would be smart to keep the arrangement on a businesslike basis.

Taurus Most of your day is likely to be filled with a number of pleasant experiences, but as nighttime rolls around and people become tired, tempers will fray.

Gemini There's a chance you know someone with a very generous nature but a demanding attitude. When socializing with this person, your patience might be tested.

Cancer It behooves you to move cautiously in matters that pertain to your investments. Take care not to get involved in something that is all sizzle but no steak.

Leo If you're smart, you'll go along with the line of least resistance. You might have to be mentally alert in order to avoid opposition.

Virgo A failure on your part to keep pace with your duties could lead to a number of avoidable complications. Each additional task you neglect will add to the pressure.

Libra It's in your best interest to avoid all political involvements with friends. What transpires at first might be interesting, but conditions could turn sour quickly.

Scorpio An extremely important objective might not be as equally meaningful to most of your friends. However, what is interesting to them could quickly become dominant.

Sagittarius Sources of information will be of extreme importance to those with whom you have dealings. If you're not the author of a vital tidbit, be sure to credit the author.

Capricorn Unless you manage your financial arrangements with skill, you are likely to come out on the short end. Speak up if you think you're getting a bum deal.

Aquarius One-on-one relationships could be problematic if they aren't handled skillfully. For the sake of harmony, be prepared to make a compromise or concession.

Pisces When you're able to use your initiative, things will run quite smoothly. Conversely, you might rebel if demands are placed on you. EUGENIA LAST
